Celebration for Education Lights Up the Night

Over 625 people attended the Celebration for Education dinner and auction on Saturday, November 17th, at Lombardo's in Randolph. The event raised $175,000 to fund language arts programs in the Milton public schools, as well as the ongoing work of the Milton Foundation for Education.

Guests bid on a wide array of silent and live auction items, many of which were donated by parents, teachers, and school staff. The evening was a resounding success according to Helene Haddad, president of the Milton Foundation for Education, noting that proceeds will enhance and enrich English language reading and literature programs for all students in each of the six Milton public schools. "We are extremely grateful to our sponsors, donors, volunteers and guests who made this a spectacular evening for all. I am thrilled, too, that because of the generosity of the entire community, Celebration for Education will have a positive and lasting impact on every child in our town's public schools."
